

CONVERSATION STARTERS

Open-ended questions are excellent conversation starters because they matter to everyone, and everyone can answer them. Everyone has a story to share and everyone can participate in the conversation. They don't require expertise or information. They lead to conversations, not debates. A good conversation changes us, helps us bond and can change our world.

Here are some suggested questions for you. Feel free to make them your own. If you come up with other interesting suggestions please share with your Sinai Connections Liaison.

- How/why is Temple important to you?
- What does "Doing Jewish" mean to you?
- What does Israel mean to you?
- How do we disagree?
- How do we love?
- Who represents you?
- How do we connect?
- What have you learned so far?
- When do you conform?
- How does technology change us?
- For whom are we responsible?
- What will your legacy be?
- When do you take a stand?
- How do you recharge?
- What do we assume...?
- When are you satisfied?
- What will you do better this year?
- Who is in your family?
- What do you need to learn?
- What does community mean to you?
- Where do you give?
- What does the world need from you?
- What are you thankful for?
- Where do you feel at home?
- When do you feel secure?
- What do we choose to ignore?
- When do you say no?
- What advantages do you have?
- What are you here for?
- What trait in a friend is the most important to you?
- What is the top item on your bucket list?
- What/who has had the most influence on you in your life?
- If you could do something over again, what would it be?

